What was the girl's name who just read about what she noticed. I missed her name. I hope that in the future she will notice more positive things than negative.

RJ, a beautiful poem. There were two lines toward the end where the vowel sound repetition between "Carolina Sky" and "suicide" was profound. I also liked the part about Sicily and you should continue to explore this imagery and inspiration in your future works.

Lily - That was lovely and vulnerable. Since you asked for constructive criticism, the only thing I would say is - pace yourself and speak a bit more slowly - give the words and lines room to breathe.
